Your husband died with calm. He was very content to know you with the children and in security. He said he disposed things well enough and he is sure that his name and position will be cleared. He wants the world to know everything about him, but more than this he wants you and the children to be safe. Therefore he wanted to say to you that until the end of the war and the beginning of a life without risks you should not do anything which could make your position more difficult. Then he said if you are free and can do what you like you have to think it over very well because he does not know the reaction of the world and there is still the possibility that people always see in you the daughter of your father. But he was not nervous at all, he had much confidence in you and your intelligence and he said you certainly would find out the best thing to do and also the best thing moment to do it. Then he hoped his mother might join you with the help of her son in law. As for himself he wanted to be buried in Livorno. I spoke about this with his friend Zenone who will do all he is able to do. I also went to his mother. She too wants to come here but of course she cannot go without passport etc. If M. will help her, it's all right, if not, it's perhaps better for her to stay where she is because things are so difficult here. They do not do much. Next week I have to go back to Italy, is there anything I could do for you?
